MAIR, Charles.—Canadian Government Immigration Agent. Born Lanark, Ont., Sept. 21, 1838, son of James Mair, from Scotland, a limit owner and pioneer in the early '30s of the square timber trade in the Ottawa Valley. Educated grammar school, Perth; Queen's University. Became interested, in youth, in Northwest and Hudson's Bay questions; was called to Ottawa in Spring of 1868, by Hon. Wm. McDougall, one of the Commissioners to England, to treat for the surrender of the Territories, to prepare in the Parliamentary Library a Precis of extant evidence on the Hudson's Bay Company's title. Sent to Fort Garry same Fall as paymaster to party engaged in opening up an immigration route to Lake of the Woods, and then to Lake Superior; work stopped by Riel. Wrote extensive descriptive letter to Toronto Globe and other Eastern papers which induced the first immigration from Ontario to Red River. A prisoner in the hands of the insurrectionists in the following rebellion, sharing the same cell with the martyr, Scott. Sentenced to death by Riel; escaped from prison, and, reaching Portage La Prairie, assisted, in Feb., 1870, in organizing an expedition to capture Fort Garry by surprise, release the prisoners still held there, and restore the Queen's authority. Scheme defeated by a furious blizzard, resulting in the capture of the expedition on its return, excepting self and four others, who escaped to the Portage on snowshoes. Thence he took guides and a dog train and snowshoed across the plains to Fort Abercrombie, Dakota. Thence by stage and rail to St. Paul, and so to Ontario. Assisted by lectures and speeches there in the great public meetings held in Toronto and elsewhere, which led to the Wolseley expedition. Lived at Portage La Prairie until 1876, and then removed to Prince Albert, Sask., where, foreseeing the second Riel insurrection, he broke up his business and removed his family to Windsor, Ont. In that insurrection he acted as Quartermaster of the Governor General's Body Guard, Toronto Cavalry Corps, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel George T. Denison, and is now probably the only man alive who took an active part in both rebellions. One of the founders in Ottawa in 1868 of "The Canada First Party." Ex-fellow of the Royal Society of Canada. Contributed in youth many poems and articles to Canadian magazines and papers, and subsequently to Toronto Week. DONALD MCKELLAR

MCKELLAR, Donald.—Miner and pioneer (retired). Born near Glencoe, Middlesex County, Ont., July 17, 1843, son of Duncan and Margaret Brodie McKellar, of Argyleshire, Scotland. Educated public schools, Middlesex County, Ontonagon County, Michigan. His father, Duncan McKellar, moved to upper peninsula of Michigan with family, 1855, where became interested in prospecting and mining. In this profession educated four sons, who moved to the north shore of Lake Superior, known as Thunder Bay District, 1864, and made the following discoveries: Thunder Bay Silver Mine, Enterprise Mine of Black Bay, Zenith Zinc Mine, Huronian Gold Mine, Atikokan Iron Mine, and many others; they built the first gold stamp mill erected north of Lake Superior in Ontario, on the Huronian property. On account of the McKellars' familiarity with the country through their prospecting work, Donald McKellar, in the summer of 1870, was summoned by S. J. Dawson (who was in charge of the transportation of the military expedition commanded by Colonel Wolseley, now Lord Wolseley) to take charge of and conduct the boats up the Mattawan River, which feat he accomplished successfully, Captain Young, 60th Rifles, having made a failure with the boats, saying it was impossible to navigate them up river, and insisted on being taken back by wagon road. After military expedition, he was put in charge of the Government stores at Prince Arthur's Landing winter of 1870-1871, with ten teams of horses and about forty men, who were kept employed graveling the worst part of the road to Shenandowan Lake preparatory for future requirements. The following summer there was a great rush of immigration, and the road being just opened, Mr. McKellar was put in charge of the section between Lac De Mille Lac and Rainy Lake, a distance of one hundred miles through the wilds, looking after the interests of and forwarding the emigrants. This was the beginning of the first immigration into the Canadian Northwest. Life member of McKellar Hospital Board; Councillor, Fort William, Ont., for several terms. JOHN ALEXANDER LOW WADDELL

WADDELL, John Alexander Low, C. E., B. A. Sc., Ma. E., LL. D., D. E.—Consulting engineer of Waddell & Harrington, 1012 Baltimore Ave., Kansas City, Mo., and 510 Winch Building, Vancouver. Born Port Hope, Ont., Jan. 15, 1854, son of Angeline Esther and Robert Needham Waddell; High Sheriff of Northumberland and Durham Counties, 1865-1885. Educated: Trinity College, School, Port Hope; Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y. (C. E., 1875); McGill University (B. A. Sc., 1882; Ma. E., 1882; D. Sc., 1904); Missouri State University conferred degree of LL. D., 1904; University of Nebraska conferred degree of Doctor of Engineering, 1911. Decorated by the Emperor of Japan, 1888, Knight Commander of the Order of the Rising Sun; and by Grand Duchess Olga of Russia (sister of the Czar) First Class Order Societe de Bienfaisance, for services as Principal Engineer of Trans-Alaska-Siberian Ry. Began career as draftsman, Marine Department, Ottawa, 1875; engineer field work, C. P. R., 1876-1877; Assistant Professor of Rational and Technical Mechanics, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, 1878-1880; Chief Engineer, Raymond & Campbell, bridge builders, Council Bluffs, 1881-1882; Professor of Civil Engineering, Imperial University of Japan, 1882-1886; private practice, Kansas City since 1887; practicing alone 1887-1899; as Waddell & Hedrick, 1899-1906; present partnership formed 1906. As chief engineer of Pacific Short Line Bridge Co., designed and supervised construction of combined railway and highway bridge over Missouri River at Sioux City; chief engineer, Omaha Bridge & Terminal Ry. Co., designed a double track railway and highway bridge across the Missouri River at East Omaha, 1893. Designed and constructed a highway bridge across the Missouri River at Jefferson City, Mo.; engineered the Northwestern Elevated, Union Loop Elevated, and other elevated railway work in Chicago; was consulted in the plans for the Boston Elevated Ry.; Engineer on Y-shaped railway and highway bridge over Fraser River at New Westminster; Chief Engineer, Alberta and Great Waterways Ry., and was successfully locating line when the action of Alberta Government killed the project. For the first half of this line got far straighter line with much less vertical variation and at much less cost than anticipated, and for remaining half of line, although surveys had not been made, indications promised equally favorable results. Aided the president, Mr. Clarke, in securing concession and to raise money for building, having made two trips with him to Europe for this latter purpose. Built over 200 bridges on the Vera Cruz & Pacific Ry. of Mexico; two lighthouses and standard highway bridges for Government of Cuba; two arch bridges for New Zealand; most of the bridges on the Kansas City Southern Ry. and the Tennessee Central Ry.; large bridge over Maumee River, Toledo; Halstead Street Lift Bridge at Chicago; Hawthorne Ave. Lift Bridge, Portland, Ore.; a reinforced concrete arch bridge over the Colorado River, Austin, Texas; Red Rock Cantilever Bridge over Colorado River for Atlantic & Pacific Ry. Co.; principal bridges on Shreveport & Red River Valley Ry.; ten large bridges on the International & Great Northern Ry. in Texas; large bridge over Missouri River (having a lifting deck) at Kansas City; a highway bridge over same river at St. Charles, Mo.; a large bridge with lift span over the Mississippi River for Iowa Central Ry., Keithsburg; two reinforced concrete trestles (having longest reinforced concrete girders yet built) at Tacoma, Wash.; the Granville St., The Cambie St., and Westminster Ave. bridges over False Creek, Vancouver, B. C.; the reconstruction of the Fort Leavenworth bridge over the Missouri River; a large viaduct joining Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., and crossing the Kaw River; a large bridge with lifting deck and lifting span combined now under construction over the Willamette River, Portland, Ore., for the Harriman system; a bridge with lift span over the Arkansas River at Fort Smith, Ark., and numerous other constructions of less importance.

About the end of 1903 Dr. Waddell was retained by the International Nickel Co. of New York City, which company controls three-quarters of the world's total output of nickel, to make extensive investigation of the suitability of nickel steel for bridge building. His experiments were both elaborate and exhaustive, covering every conceivable kind of practical tests, and occupied over three years in the making, the total cost of the investigation being in the neighborhood of $50,000. After the investigation and the reports were finished, Dr. Waddell wrote for the American Society of Civil Engineers a long paper describing fully the tests and drawing numerous deductions. This paper is essentially an economic study of the question of "nickel steel for bridges," which was the title of his paper. It was published first in the "Proceedings" of the Society then discussed by a number of prominent engineers of America and Europe, and finally the paper and the discussions were published together in the Society's "Transactions" for 1909. Later, the special committee for the awarding of the Norman medal of that year unanimously decided to award it to Dr. Waddell's paper as being the best and most important one presented to the Society for that year. The practical result of Dr. Waddell's investigations on "nickel steel for bridges" has been the use of that alloy for at least three long-span bridges, viz.: The Manhattan Bridge, New York; the Free Bridge, St. Louis, and the new Quebec Bridge. Dr. Waddell's firm is also using the alloy in the moving spans of some of their vertical lift bridges in order to cut down materially the total weight to be raised and lowered. Nickel steel as a material for building long-span bridges has come to stay, and it will be used for shorter and still shorter spans as time goes on, unless some equally good or better and cheaper alloy is discovered.

Dr. Waddell is the author of the following works: A compilation of 22 of his principal professional papers, edited by John Lyle Harrington, 1905; "The Designing of Ordinary Iron Highway Bridges," published by Wiley & Sons, New York, 1884; "A System of Iron Railroad Bridges for Japan," 1885, published by the Japanese Government for private circulation only; "Civil Engineering Education," published in Engineering News; "General Specifications for Highway Bridges of Iron & Steel"; "Some Disputed Points in Railway Bridge Designing"; "Elevated Railroads"; "De Pontibus" (Wiley & Sons, 1898); "Specifications for Steel Bridges"; "Foundations for Important Buildings in the City of Mexico"; "Flow Line Bridge at Kansas City"; "Engineering Specifications and Contracts," a standard work, published by Engineering News; "Addresses to Engineering Students," a compilation of forty-four of the best addresses made to engineering students by various professors and engineers in the last 25 years, edited by Dr. J. A. L. Waddell and John Lyle Harrington, containing several papers by both editors. In preparation a large and elaborate treatise on Bridge Engineering, a joint book by Dr. Waddell and Mr. Harrington.

The firm of Waddell & Harrington has a very large practice in building bridges, giving special attention to movable structures, besides doing important work in other lines. They have designed and patented a number of improvements on Dr. Waddell's old type of vertical lift bridge. This type is being adopted by a number of the leading railroad systems of America, including the Harriman lines, Pennsylvania Railway, Iowa Central, Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, Missouri Pacific, Chicago & Northwestern, and Louisiana & Arkansas. They have in operation six vertical lifts, three more will be complete this year, and a dozen others are now being designed or constructed. Their work extends over the whole of the United States and parts of Canada, Mexico, Japan and New Zealand. Some thirteen million dollars' worth of work is (December, 1911) being prosecuted through their office.

WATT, Mrs. A. T.—Daughter Henry Robertson, K. C., Collingwood, Ont. Graduate University of Toronto (M. A.); graduate Ontario School of Pedagogy; writer New York, Toronto and Victoria (B. C.), newspapers, pen name "Madge Robertson;" president Victoria branch

Canadian Press Women's Association; secretary Advisory Board Women's Institutes to Department of Agriculture, B. C.; one of the two women members of the first Senate of the new University of British Columbia; second vice-president International Congress of Farm Women; secretary Central Council of Women's Institutes of Canada. Mrs. Watt has taken an active part in the educational, philanthropic and economic life of British Columbia, lectures frequently before different bodies, chosen by citizens of Victoria to place before the University Commission of 1910 Victoria, B. C., claims as an educational center for women; in 1912 chosen to speak before Dominion Technical on technical education for women in country; was one of charter members of first ladies' club in Canada, the Alexander, of Victoria, still the most prominent club in the west; lives in country south end of Vancouver Island; devoted to country pursuits; thorough believer in sports for women and open air life; is devoting attention to problems of country life; believes that the solution of settlement in country lies with women and that governments and colonization companies and philanthropic workers should consider well all problems of country women if they wish to have agricultural prosperity, and hence national prosperity. The only true settlement, that is homes, cannot be made without women, and if women won't stay in country, development is impossible; therefore make farm life pleasant and profitable for women—that is the key to national success; this is why Mrs. Watt is giving up her time to the work among women's institutes. She believes that this organization provides best machinery for work among country women. Mrs. Watt has written a book on "Southmost Vancouver Island," and prepares the Government Bulletins on Women's Institute Work in British Columbia, and frequently speaks at meetings and entertainments, but her greatest pleasure is her home life and country occupation. Her garden work is a continuous occupation in the pleasant mild climate of Vancouver Island, and very beautiful results ensue; she believes that farm occupations for women, poultry, dairying, market gardening, bulb growing, herb culture provide the most healthful means of earning livelihood and would like to see women farmers in all the suitable parts of Canada.
